IDENTIFICATION

QAS Automatic Slack Adjusters (ASA) and Self-setting Automatic Slack adjusters (S-ASA) are identified by the part number which is marked on the cover plate like AS**** and SS****.

After a long life in service or while still on the vehicle, it can be difficult to read the information on the cover plate. Therefore the following measurements can be taken to assist identification:

The cast housing has an identification mark, for QAS ASA this begins with T (eg T-32) and for QAS S-ASA this begins with S (eg S-43).

With the above information any QAS slack adjuster can be identified. In addition it is always useful to know the vehicle application and which wheel end the adjuster is fitted to.

* For S-ASA this is Not Applicable as the control arm will work from any position within the working arc of the control arm.

FITTING INSTRUCTIONS

Text in red is offered as advice.

If you have any questions about the fitting instructions, or require further advice, please email technical@meibrakes.com

1. Ensure the vehicle is securely chocked before releasing the parking brake. Cage the spring brake or use a minimum hold off pressure of 90 psi (6 bar).

2. Remove the old slack adjuster, clevis pin, washer and split pins. Replace used parts with the new ones provided.
- 2a. Always replace Peg Bolt with the new one provided.
- 2b. Inspect Anchor Pins and replace if worn or damaged.
- 2c. Always replace Anchor Bracket with the new one provided.

3. Clean and grease cam splines. Fit the anchor point by hand prior to final set up.

4. Slide the slack adjuster on to the cam spline, locating the control arm in the anchor point at the same time.

'The adjuster only works in the direction of the cast arrow on the housing'

FITTING INSTRUCTIONS

5. Using a socket wrench wind in the adjuster so that the clevis hole on the adjuster lines up with the clevis on the actuator.

'Do not pull the push rod to fit the pin. If required, de-adjust and start again, ensuring the clevis hole and clevis line up'

6. Grease the clevis pin before fitting. The clevis pin should slide into the holes without effort.

'If necessary, slacken off the lock nut on the clevis to achieve an easy fit and re-tighten afterwards'

7a. Fit wear indicator and return spring where present. Fit shim washers to ensure the gap prescribed. When fitting Peg Bolts ensure they protrude through the control arm grommet and tighten as prescribed.

7b. Replace cam bearings where there is excessive movement – the maximum allowable is 0.5mm.

'More movement will weaken the control arm or anchor points, disabling the adjustment'

7c. The control arm should always locate fully in the anchor bracket slot.

8i. When installing S-ASA the control arm and anchor point must allow free and full articulation of the adjuster.

'Incorrect installation can lead to clashing with surrounding chassis or components'

FITTING INSTRUCTIONS

8ii ASA

8iii. When installing ASA the control arm and anchor point must be set in the correct position, as indicated by the arrow on the control arm. This is in the same rotational direction as the arrow on the housing.

'This ensures the correct running clearance is maintained by the ASA'

On some ASA a setting indicator and notch on the control plate are provided as a visual aid. The setting indicator should line up with the notch when correctly installed.

9i

9i. Once the installation is complete, anchor points should be tightened using the prescribed torque.

9ii

9ii. Control arm must not be bent during tightening of the anchor pin.

'There should be no stress on any fixing point or clevis. Stress on the anchor points can cause fatigue and eventual fracture, disabling correct function'

10

10. Manually adjust the brake by putting a socket wrench on to the hex nut and turning until the brake linings touch the brake drum.

11

11. De-adjust the brake by turning the socket wrench in the opposite direction by  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a turn.

'You should hear a clicking noise'

FITTING INSTRUCTIONS

12. Apply and release the service brake. The hexagon should index clockwise on the release stroke.

'This is best seen by leaving a wrench or socket mounted indicator on the hex nut'

13. The function test now complete, re-set the brake by putting a socket wrench on to the hex nut and turning until the brake linings touch the brake drum.

14. De-adjust the brake by turning the socket wrench in the opposite direction by  $\frac{1}{2}$  a turn.

'This allows the brake drum to rotate freely'

15. Uncage the spring brake and apply the parking brake prior to removing the chocks from the vehicle.

MAINTENANCE

Always ensure the vehicle is securely chocked before releasing the parking brake. Cage the spring brake or use a minimum hold off pressure of 90 psi (6 bar).

REGULAR CHECK

Automatic Slack Adjusters should maintain a constant stroke of the actuator.

At regular service intervals, appropriate to the application, the following checks should be made:

Apply the brake. Observe the stroke length of the actuator.

The stroke should not exceed 2/3 of the maximum stroke of the actuator. If the stroke is more than 2/3 of maximum stroke, carry out the annual check (see page 55).

Examine the foundation brake system for seized brake shoes and cam rollers. If no other causes of excess stroke are found, replace the slack adjuster.

Check the anchor point and the condition of the control arm. If the anchor point is loose, re-fit it.

If the control arm is bent or cracked replace the slack adjuster.

Check the condition of the camshaft journal and bush. If there is more than 0.5mm gap replace the camshaft and bush.

QAS Automatic and Self-setting Automatic Slack Adjusters should be lubricated every 10,000 km.

ANNUAL CHECK

The following check should be made annually for truck and trailer applications. For city bus applications it should be carried out every quarter.

Using a socket wrench or socket mounted indicator, rotate the hex nut  $270^\circ$  in anti-clockwise direction.

Using a torque wrench, rotate the hex nut in anti-clockwise direction:

There should be an audible clicking sound.

Repeat the operation to ensure the clutch is engaged.

The torque required to turn the hex nut must be 18Nm.

If there is no clicking sound or the torque required is less than 18Nm replace the slack adjuster.

Apply the brake 5 times.

The wrench or indicator will move in a clockwise direction on each application of the brake.

If the wrench or indicator does not move replace the slack adjuster.

After any service or maintenance, always reset the brake:

Re-set the brake by putting a socket wrench on to the hex nut and turning until the brake linings touch the brake drum.

De-adjust the brake by turning the socket wrench in the opposite direction by 1/2 a turn.

Uncage the spring brake and apply the parking brake prior to removing the chocks from the vehicle.

Note that QAS Automatic and Self-setting Automatic Slack Adjusters cannot compensate for other defects within the braking system. Worn or missing return springs, loose wheel bearings, defective actuators, worn camshaft journals, camshaft bushes or camshaft rollers and worn anchor pins must all be rectified for the brake system to function properly.
